ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT THE INSTITUTION.

Twelve Graduates in This Year's Class-The Day's Programme-Growth of the School.

Commencement exercises were held yesterday at the Indiana Institution for the Education of the Deaf for the eighteenth time since Superintendent Richard O. Johnfifty-seventh time since the establishment of the institution. Three hundred and twenty-six students attended the school during the last year and of these twelve made up the graduating class. They were: Ida Emily Arnot, Delphi; Anna Ida Friday, Medaryville; Emma Helen Goodpaster, Aurora; Lillian Lucile Henning, Bloomington; Winona Holmes, Indianapolis; Georgia Winifred Lee, Poseyville; Charles Franklin Craig, Alum Cave; Victor Elmer Evans, Sullivan; William Earl Fry, Headlee; Henry Kuebne, Evansville; Clyde Ely Myers, Syracuse; Franklin D. Sackett, Ligonier.

The programme opened in the morning with an invocation by Dr. W. H. De Motte, a short address by the Rev. J. Cumming Lillian Henning, Anna Friday, Emma Goodpaster and Winona Holmes, followed by an essay by William Earl Fry on the "Industrial Education of the Negro." Henry the world. He begged the members of the S. Cornwell's "The Sunset City," was the class not to take the view that life is a subject of a recitation by Georgia Winifred Lee. A concert recitation, "The Man Behind the Gun," was given by Henry Kuebne. Clyde Myers, Charles F. Craig, Franklin D. Sackett and Victor E. Evans. Ida E. Arnot read an essay which was a character sketch of the late Maurice Thompson, of Crawfordsville.

The young men of the class leave the school after completing the industrial courses of wood-working, printing and shoemaking. All of the girl graduates have been trained in domestic duties and are proficient.

One of the addresses of interest which was not on the programme was that of Superintendent Johnson, who reviewed the history of the school. Essays on Various Phases of Life-A Word of Warning from Mr. Sweeney.

The Shortridge High School sent 125 young men and women out into the world last night under the motto, "Know thy work and do it." The class-the young men in black, the young women in white, each | to something practical and of some account holding a long-stemmed Marechal Niel rose or a cluster of them-was banked on the stage of English's Opera House, and on the right side of the stage, close to the footlights, sat the Rev. Lewis Brown, of St. Paul's Church, who delivered the prayer, George W. Hufford, the principal of the school, and Andrew M. Sweeney, member of the Board of School Commissioners, who distributed the diplomas at the close of the programme. In the orchestra pit were the musicians of the school, who, with Henry Sulcer, who sang, "Oh Fair, Oh Sweet and Holy," furnished the music.

The audience filled the theater. Ruth Woodsmall, who took second honors in the class, gave the first essay. She discussed the popular literature of the day in an essay entitled "Fads in Fiction." Yesterday morning was the time set for the strike unless the company showed a willingness to meet representatives of the matter. The committee waited upon the management and was refused an audience as representatives of a union, but the mer were told that they would be received individually. The committee then communicated with Labor Commissioner McCormack, who advised them not to strike at noon. Soon after going to work in the afttools. Commissioner McCormack was then notified and attended a meeting of the vised them to be orderly, keep away from places cannot be filled on account of the scarcity of wheel-workers, and that members of their craft will not take the places of strikers. The men have not asked the company to sign a contract to employ none but union that they have a right to organize. While it is not a demanu, this virtually means recognition of the union. The contention over the weekly pay is a grievance that has long existed at the plant. Commissioner McCormack, when asked regarding this feature of the contention, said the company has not been authorized by the Labor Commission to pay biweekly, as provided by law. The law provides that a petition for raying less frequently than weekly must be signed by 50 per cent. of the employes and posted in the factory ten days before the application is granted by the Labor Commission. Such a notice was posted in the plant a year ago, but it is charged that the company intimidated its employes by stating that if extra help became necessary to make out a weekly pay roll the additional expense would come out of the men's wages. Commissioner McCormack said that at the time several men came to him and stated that it was not their desire to have a biweekly pay day. On this account no such privilege was given. State Factory Inspector McAbee was notified that the firm was not paying weekly, but on account of court cases pending in Muncle and Anderson, to test the constitutionality of the law no steps toward enforcement were In each of these courts the law was held constitutional and the employers appealed to the Supreme Court, where the cases are now pending. Mr. McCormack said that Governor Mount had been consulted about the enforcement and advised that it be withheld until the Supreme Court had announced its decision. Mr. McCormack said that several other firms in the State are similarly affected, and as soon as a decision is given, if the lower courts are sustained, immediate enforcement of the law will be made. Commissioner McCormack, Organizer John Blue, of Central Labor Union, and the union will have a meeting this morning. after which a committee of the union will again try to hold a conference with the

The County School Superintendents' Association of Indiana began a three days' session in the Supreme Court room of the State Capitol yesterday afternoon. The roll call showed an atendance of sixty county superintendents. Three papers were read at the session perintendent Jones claimed the township was liable on advanced money when money was borrowed to pay claims when the levy was not sufficient to pay the expenses of a six months' school term. Superintendent Jones discussed the revised grammars, and Superintendent W. A. Hester, of Evansville, discussed the new spelling book.

Before adjournment a committee was appointed to consider the revision of grading teachers. The members of the committee are Charles F. Grosjean, Vigo county; E. C. Jerman, Decatur county; I. F. Myer, Carroll county; C. W. Paris, Randolph county; M. W. Deputy, Jennings county. The wage law provides that teachers shall not be paid a less amount daily than the product of 21/2 times the general average, which is determined by the average scholarship shown, on the license and the grade in success, provided that where a teacher has not taught the wages shall be found by the product of 21/2 by the scholarship

All teachers in the State not holding icense from the last school year for teaching next year will be compelled to pass examinations next fall in order to secure a license under the new law. The committee named above will consider a revision of the grading of teachers in order to more accurately determine their worth as teachers, and a basis for their daily The committee will report at tomorrow's session, and the report will be discussed by all of the superintendents, as the question is an important one to all teachers in the State. The superintendents, however, will not be compelled to abide by the report of the committee, as the matter of grading teachers is left entirely in their charge, governed by the examination of teachers.

The strike of the molders at the Chandler & Taylor works was settled Tuesday by the discharge of Michael McNulty, because but yesterday the incidents connected with the strike were gone over in detail in Police Court. On May 29 McNulty was terribly beaten by John Lucke, one of the strikers, and an affidavit was filed against him in Police Court. James Watters, another of the striking molders, was also made defendant, it being charged that he fellowed Lucke as he pursued McNulty when he came from work and urged the beating. McNulty had formerly belonged to the union and went to Cleveland to take the place of strikers there, and then returned and was thrown out of the union. It was shown in evidence that on Sunday preceding the fight Watters had gone to McNulty's house and told him if he did not quit work in the factory there would be trouble. The fight followed. John S. The board of managers of the institution recommended the parole because the woman has been a burden to the prison authorities. Her brother, a man of some means, who resides in the far West, has sent money to pay her railroad fare to his home and has given assurances that he will care for her. The crime for which Miss Southwood was given a life sentence was the murder of her two illegitimate children, to which charge she pleaded guilty.

It's the little things that count. It's the tack that you step on, the collar button that you lose, the keyhole that you cannot find-'tis such little things that make nine-tenths of all the trouble in the world.

It's the poor fabric that gives out, the little knacks of fit that are missing, the certain graceful "hang" that is not there-'tis such things about clothing that ruin a tailor's reputation and the wearer's confidence in his tailor, if they are not watched. It's watching every detail of our clothing-it's making sure that every detail, inside and outside, is RIGHT that has given "Bliss-Swain" clothing its present reputation.

And in the face of that fact, we're selling splendid $12.50 and $15.00 Suits, elegantly fashioned from fine serges, cheviots, cassimeres and plain and fancy worsteds, for
